FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

KENYON LAUNCHES BETA TESTING OF KENYON INTERNATIONAL'S ONLINE LEARNING CENTER

Houston, October 21, 2013 – Kenyon International Emergency Services is excited to announce the beta testing phase of the new Kenyon International Online Learning Center. All full-time staff and a selection of associates and Team Members are conducting the beta test. Participation includes taking the first course in Religious Sensitivity and providing vital feedback.

This critical online learning tool represents a significant investment in Kenyon's professional development opportunities. The goal is centralize Kenyon's significant experience and knowledge to enhance incident response capability, adding one more facet to the full complement of global knowledge that Kenyons are known for. The online platform allows for flexibility and ease of access for Kenyon's worldwide network of experts. Planned courses include both internal and external programs, providing accessible online learning opportunities for Kenyon staff, associates and Team Members and soon, Kenyon clients.

The beta testing phase including improvement implementation is planned for the remainder of November 2013. Widespread disbursement of the initial courses and potential commercial opportunities for the Kenyon International Online Learning Center are planned for January 2014.
